International foundation of fashion technology institute (IFFTI) is operating with 45 renowned fashion institute of 22 countries. Their main purpose is to integrate global textile and clothing business through cooperative development among fashion educational institutes. As a part of this, every year IFFTI faculty exchange initiative program helps fashion professionals to visit other international fashion institutions to share knowledge and develop co-operative research.

This year, a lecturer from BGMEA University of Fashion and Technology (BUFT), Iftexhar Rahman is selected to visit Manchester Metropolitan University (MMU), England. This could be a milestone in BUFT's continuous research and development on Bangladeshi fashion education. During the visit he is going to introduce different aspects of Bangladeshi fashion industry to the students of MMU also learn about their curriculum and teaching methods at classroom. In near future, He would like to research on the development of fashion education system and increasing creativity among the fashion students of Bangladesh.
