 Grammar is Great  THE INFINITIVE PHRASE

Education Desk

Recognizing an infinitive phrase: An infinitive phrase will begin with an infinitive (to + simple form of the verb). It will include objects and/or modifiers. Here are some examples:
To smash a guiter
To kick the ball past the dazed goalie
To lick the grease from his shiny fingers despite the disapproving glances of his girlfriend Gloria

Infinitive phrases can function as nouns, adjectives, or adverbs. Look at these examples:

To finish her shift without spilling another pizza into a customer's lap is Michelle's only goal tonight.

To finish her shift without spilling another pizza into a customer's lap functions as a noun because it is the subject of the sentence.

Lakisha hopes to win the approval of her mother by stitching her major from fine arts to proceed.

To win the approval of her mother functions as a noun because it is the direct object for the verb hopes.

The best way to survive Dr. Peterson's boring history lectures is a sharp pencil to stab in your thigh if you catch yourself drifting off.

To survive Dr. Peterson's boring history lectures functions as an adjective because it modifies way.

Kelvin, an aspiring comic book artist, is taking Anatomy and Physiology this semester to understand the interplay of muscle and bone in the human body.

To understand the interplay of muscle and bone in the human body functions as an adverb because it explains why Kelvin is taking the class. Punctuating an infinitive phrase correctly:

When an infinitive phrase introduces a main clause, separate the two series components with a comma. The pattern looks like this: Infinitive Phrase + , + Main Clause

Example: Brendan pressed his nose against the microwave door, sniffing its ominous

When an infinitive phrase begins a flow of a main clause, use a comma both before and after the infinitive. The pattern looks like this: Start of Main Clause + , - Infinitive + , - End of Main Clause

Example: These basketball shoes, so Ah-hem, do not complement the planning to wear to the arena!

When an infinitive phrase functions as a main clause, you need a conjunction to connect the two series. The pattern looks like this: Main Clause + Conjunction + Infinitive

Example: Janice and her friends were so flirt with the color page that at the food court.
